I have been looking for a good demonstrative video of spreading contrails and noticed a really nice one at your website:

http://chemtrails.serveftp.net/chemtrails/archives/videos/02\_12\_04\_a.avi

I was wondering if I could have a copy of the video to use for educational purposes on my website.

Thanks
Sincerely,
Patrick Minnis

Hello.

Thank you for your letter concerning the video of spreading "chemtrails" on our website. We are flattered that NASA is viewing our site and interested in this video. That being said, the video is not to be used for any "educational purposes" that proclaim that the "contrails" in the video are "normal", which I am sure is your purpose. The trails seen in the video are not normal and are clear evidence that there is something very wrong in our skies. To anyone that would claim these are normal, I would then suggest that there is something obviously wrong with "normal".

Your reputation far exceeds you Mr. Minnis and is apparent in your lack of honesty in your email to us.

"Minnis, an expert on contrails and an active debunker of chemtrails,"

"Patrick Minnis, who seems to be the appointed "anti-chemtrail" spokesman at NASA's Langley Base"

"Mr. Minnis speaks untruths out of one side of his mouth and lies out of the other side"

"Minnis stated that 'the cloud-forming contrails that conspiracy theorists find so ominous are perfectly natural'".

It is rather interesting that NASA would want (or need) a video from a "chemtrail" website, considering the millions of dollars worth of technology at its fingertips. Flattering, but your request is misleading and deceptive.

Remember, our videos and photos are to be used on our website only and for our purposes only. We do appreciate you asking.

Thank you for contacting us on this matter,
